

State Employee Writing Workshop

WITH JIM HALE

“Jim Hale’s unique blend of technical mastery, practical experience, and superlative teaching abilities makes this simply the most useful writing course I’ve ever had.”

TUESDAY, MAY 16, 8:30AM-3:30PM

The Alaska State Library is pleased to host award-winning writer, editor, former English professor, and retired technical writer Jim Hale for a one-day writing workshop.

Past participants have praised Jim’s practical solutions to the everyday problems of writing in the workplace, whether you write correspondence, newsletters, technical reports and analyses - or even just the usual slew of daily emails.

The State of Alaska has been one of Jim’s chief clients over the years, and he has developed a number of ongoing conversations with many of the people who have taken the class. To keep those conversations and professional relationships thriving in the face of lower budgets, Jim is offering the class once again—the last of three such pro bono classes—free to State of Alaska employees.

REGISTER AT WWW.JIMHALEWRITING.COM

395 WHITTIER STREET
907-465-2920

HOURS: 10-4 TUE-FRI
library.alaska.gov

