DISCOVERED AMERICA

~~NOTICE: Try to get Seattle P.I. Sun. July 8 1962 on reverse side of Editorial page and save article by Arthur J. Dommen----excerpts of which follow:~~

Hong Kong July 7 (UPI) A Peiping University professor contends that five men led by a 23-year old Buddhist sailed from China via the Kurile and Aleutian Islands to Mexico in the year A.D. 459, thus reviving the debate about who discovered America first.

The professor, Chu Shienchi, cited similarities of language, mythology and coinage between the Aztecs and the culture of Ancient China to prove his contention.

Chu, a professor of philosophy, made his remarks in---- ----(missing portions begin) ing ancient records through what is now the Kurile Ids and through the Aleutians.

Chu, who is reported to have studied the question of Wai Sum's voyage for many years, advanced three main reasons for his contention:

The Aztecs bore many resemblances to the Mongolians,

Who by their migrations gave rise to the Chinese nation, Chu said. Among these/ most direct links, Chu said, references to the Chinese have been found in Mexico, in the words "put shan-fung, which literally means "fellow countrymen"..... (Missing portions)

NORSE CLAIMS

Seattle P.I. 3/10/1963 What is the main source for the belief of many scholars that Norsemen discovered America long before Columbus arrived in 1492?

The "Flateyjarbok" which is a collection of Norse sagas written in the years 1380 to 1395 in Iceland by two priests. Their writings are now preserved in the Royal Library of Copenhagen, Denmark. No scholars have ever been able to prove that the Norse tales told in the "Flateyjarbok" are either true or untrue: and so, on the provable record, Columbus is still given credit for being the first to discover America.
