HANSEN, CAPT. OLAF H.

Of "Courtney Ford"

Poem from NEWS LETTER No. 88 Feb 1957

A Winter Night in Port Armstrong.

We are anchored tonight in a sheltered cove,
And I sit in the wheelhouse and dream:
Watching the hurrying-scurrying snow,
As it flits past the anchorlights gleam.

The storm-king is shrieking through rigging and masts,
And the Willi-wau's thundering squalls,
Sweeping down from the mountains in furious blasts,
My soul from its hiding place calls.

The slumbering Viking awakens once more,
And I feel like a King on his throne;
That is something a number of people ashore,
Quite likely, never have known.

Impatiently tugging away at her chain,

How she reels to the swirls in the bay;
Tomorrow, old girl, we will try it again,
But tonight you are come here to stay!

The blessing God sent me much brighter appear,
Now passing in silent review,
Also the fact I am anchored in here,
Instead of out yonder, hove to.

And my thoughts wander homewards far over the sea
To my dear Sweetheart and wife,
Where fain I would linger but that cannot be,
For such is a Sea-Captain's life.

HALLIBURTON, RICHARD

Author, adventurer
Lecturer

S.P.I. 1/20/1957

Article tells of "Hangover House" on the bluffs somewhere near South Laguna, Calif. 500' above the Pacific. It was built by Halliburton in 1938---he claimed he found the place while horse-back riding on the beach below it in the early 1930's It cost $42,000. to build.

"I never saw a house so far away from man and so close to God," he wrote. "It doesn't sit--it flies."

It was Mar. 24, 1939, that a radiogram told the tragic and untimely death of one of the country's most popular and prolific adventure writers and lecturers.

"Storm blowin up," the message said. "Decks awash."

It was the last word from the Halliburton's Chinese junk, the "Sea Dragon", on her maiden voyage from Hong Kong to S.F....

The place was purchased by Wallace T. Scott from the Hallibutron estate at an auction in 1941. He was the only bidder. There are 50 tons of steel and 100 tons of concrete in the structure.

It was natural that he built where he did, for it was siren whisper of the sea which started young Halliburton a native of Brownsville, Tenn. on his career. While a Soph. at Princeton U. he sailed from N. Orleans, working his way as a seaman to Europe.

In 1920 he returned, stayed long enough to pick up a degree, then set out on a world tour. Stories in the National Geographic and other publications helped pay the way.

The result was the "The Royal Road to Romance" an immediate best seller which was translated into 10 languages.

Although slender of build, his physical prowess was remarkable. He is believed to be the first American to swim the tricky Hellespont. He swam the Panama Canal locks, lakes and all, nearly 50 miles. He dove into the seemingly bottomless well of death at Chichen Itza, Yucatan. He climbed Japan's Mt. Fujiyama in the winter after being told it was impossible.

He scaled Mt. Olympus to be near the legendary Greek Gods. He climbed the Matterhorn, Popocateptl and other high peaks. He crossed the Alps on an elephant like Hannibal.

These adventures related in books and on the lecture platform made him a national figure.

His last trip would have been his most famous. He planned to sail the "Sea Dragon" to S.F. "straight into the Golden Gate" where it was to go on display at the S.F. Exhibition.

(2)

HALLIBURTON, RICHARD

The junk was built especially for the trip and outfitted for a long voyage. It was only 19 days out of Hong Kong when that last message was received.

His final glorious adventure had ended. He was only 39 years old.

Some others of his writings (books) are "The Flying Carpet", "Seven League Boots", and "New Worlds to Conquer".

There is a Pict. of him in my N.B. 24.

HEMINGWAY, ERNEST

" FOR WHOM THE BELLS TOLL" Hemingway selected this title from a sermon by an English clergyman named John Donne Years ago in England when a man died, the villagers rang a church bell to signal the townspeople. When villagers heard the bell at odd hours, they'd presumably ask, "Who has died?" So John Donne told them----using an older English than this----from his pulpit: "No man is an island entire of itself...Every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main.... If a clod be washed away by the sea, Europe is the less, as well as if a promontory were, as well as if the manor of thy friend or of thine own were.... Any man's death diminishes me because I am involved in mankind.....Therefore, never send to know for whom the bells toll....It tolls for thee."
