Of the Revenue Cutter Service, conducted an overland expedition for the relief of the whaling fleet imprisoned by ice at Point Barrow. Dec. 16, 1897 he and 3 companions were landed by the "Bear" on Nunivak island, Bering sea near Cape Vancouver. They travelled by dog teams to St. Michael, along Norton sound to Cape York, then to Kotzebue sound on ice and along the Arctic coast to Point Barrow, which they reached Mar 29, 1898.

Expedition is remarkable for enterprise, endurance and heroism rather than for its contributions to geographic knowledge.

Race With Empress of Russia

Danish born, Capt. Jensen had one outstanding characteristic. He was proud of the American flag. Back in 1922 when, as Master of the President Grant, he was one day out of Yokohama, enroute to Seattle, the 'Grant' was overhauled by the crack Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Russia" The 'Empress' was full steam ahead and her passengers stood at the rail in the belief that she would show her heels to the old "Grant". Capt. Jensen called Chief Rober on the ship telephone and asked "Are you going to take it?" "Not on your life!" was the answer-----Continue on in Scrap book.

JOE LOY

Chinese cook (Alaskan)

"You may fire when you are ready, Gridley, said Comm. Dewey at 05:42 on ~~that~~ that historic morning at Manila Bay when his squadron of cruisers and gunboats licked the Spanish fleet before breakfast.

What the Comm. said when he ordered breakfast that morn. is not recorded by history. Did he have his eggs sunny-side up? Or hard boiled?

A man who might have answered that question died in Ketch. a few days ago. His name was Joe Loy and to all but a few who knew him well he was just another ancient Chink.

While it is not certain that Joe Loy cooked Dewey's breakfast after the shooting was over on that bright morn. of May 1, 1898, it is known that he was one of the cooks aboard the cruiser "Olympia" which carried Dewey's flag.

Born in Canton nearly 86 years ago, Joe received a better than average education before he left his homeland. In later years he wrote hundreds of letters, in Chinese brush characters, for his less skilled countrymen in Alaska.

It was about 1890 when Joe first arrived in Alaska as one of the cooks aboard the little gunboat "Pinta" which was stationed in these waters from 1884 to 1897. He remained on her until she finished her 'hitch' and went back to the Mare Island yard in the summer of 1897. At Mare Id he transferred to the gunboat "Concord" bound to Hong Kong and there he was transferred to the "Olympia"

When the S.A. War ended the ships were decommissioned and Joe was out of a job. Soon he went cooking in the old U.S. Rev. cutter service and was in the galley of the old "Perry" when she wrecked in 1910 and also on the "Tahoma" which wrecked in 1914. Thereafter he shifted to vessels purposely seeking the rocks and reefs---the U.S. Geodetic Survey. His last sea service is believed to have been in the "Surveyor"

After he left the sea, Joe worked as cook in the Sunny Point cannery in Ketch. and other S.E. Alaska canneries until he was well up in his '70's. He quit working for wages then, but he continued to make his own living, or a large part of it.

He was not one to hang around the fish docks where he might easily have bummed small halibut, etc. from the fishermen and buyers. Joe Loy caught his own fish and for many years the little old Chinaman, trudging home with a string of black bass or rock cod, was a familiar sight on the streets of Ketchikan.

There were no military honors for Joe Loy when he was buried. Although a military force may travel on its belly, the cooks of the outfit are seldom honored.

But Joe Loy was also an Alaskan for upward of sixty years; one of the breed of Alaskan pioneers who believed in rustling for himself so long as he was able. As such, we salute him here.
