MALASPINA

1791

(Capt. Alessandro.)

An Italian navigator in the service of Spain, in command of the "Descubierta" and accompanied by Bustamente in the "Atrevida", arrived on the Alaskan coast June 2, 1791, near Sitka and surveyed the coast to Pr. Wm. Sd. looking for the N.W. passage reported by Maldonado. A publication of this voyage was printed in Madrid, yet strange to say, no mention of Malaspina, who work is highly praised, is made. On his return to Spain, the infamous Godoy, known as the Prince of Peace, confined him in a dungeon at Corunna and there kept him till the peace of Amiens in 1802, when at the express desire of Napoleon, he was liberated.

(Pilot---Francisco Antonio Maurelle)

Spanish exploration on the N.W. coast of America North of Calif. began in 1774. In that year Perez and Martinez reached and anchored in Nootka Id. Vancouver Id.

In 1775, by command of the Mexican Viceroy Bucareli there was despatched the royal galiot "Sonora", under command of Quadra, to make explorations North of Calif. With him went Pilot Maurelle. On this trip they discovered, named and in part surveyed Bucareli bay. Four years later a second voyage was undertaken by the Spaniards. Quadra in command of "La Princesa", and Don Ignacio Arteaga, in command of "La Favorita", with Maurelle as pilot, left San Blas, Mexico, Feb. 11, 1779 and cruised Northward as far as the mouth of Copper river, then returned to San Blas on Nov. 21, 1779. They also made revised and additional surveys in Bucareli bay

La Perouse secured and published a copy of their map in 1798. The Spaniards were secretive about their explorations, avoided publication, and thus have left little impress on the geography of the region they visited.

MEARES &amp; DOUGLAS

1788-89

(Capt. John Meares)

(Capt. Wm. Douglas)

Meares, in Jan. 1788, in connection with several British merchants resident in India, bought and fitted out two vessels, the "Felice" under Meares, and the "Iphegenia" under Douglas. They sailed together from Typa, near Macao, China Jan 22, 1788, cruised around the Phillipines and, parting company, Meares reached Nootka, on May, 13, and Douglas arrived in Cook inlet June 16. From Cook inlet Douglas voyaged east and south and joined Meares at Nootka Aug. 27, 1788. Meares cruised and traded about Van. Id. and what is now Wash. State, and later both officers sailed to the Hawaiian Ids. They returned and again traded on the N.W. coast of America then sailed to China.

MEARES &amp; TIPPING

1786-87

(Capt. John Meares)

(Lt. Wm. Tipping. R.N.)

Meares, in the "Nootka", sailed from Bengal, India on Mar. 2, 1786, on a trading voyage to Malacca and N.W. America. About the same time Tipping, in command of the "Sea Otter", left. Both ships were owned by the same Co. of merchants and were to cooperate. Meares made land at Atka Aug. 1, then cruised east down the Aleutians, to Unalaska, Shumigans, Kodiak, Cook inlet and Pr. Wm. Sd. where the "Sea Otter" had preceeded him and departed with a cargo of peltries. Meares decided to winter in Pr. Wm. Sd. Spent a very uncomfortable winter---many of his crews dying of scurvy. On May, 17, 1787 he was visited by Capt. Geo. Dixon, another Eng. trader, Of his ships company, 23 had died and on June 21, he left with only 24 left. Took 10 days to Sitka then left for the Hawaiian Ids, then to China. Nothing was ever heard of Tipping and the "Sea Otter" after he left Pr. Wm. Sd.
