Alaska Lantern Slides Collection, ca. 1894- [ongoing]

PCA 208

334 glass slides (b&w, col.)
(6 boxes)

Processed: Staff

ACQUISITION: The origin of the original collection is unknown. The collection is ongoing. Recent acquisitions include a purchase from Mrs. Hudson's Fine Books and Papers in New York, a donation from Candy Waugaman, and a purchase from Robert Kolbe's Antiques, Books & Clocks in South Dakota. (Acc. No. 2001-110, Acc. No. 2003-056, Acc. No. 2006-06.)

ACCESS: The slides may be viewed, however, they may not be photocopied.

COPYRIGHT: Request for permission to publish or reproduce material from the collection should be discussed with the librarian.

PROCESSING: The slides are individually sleeved in archival paper sleeves and have been numbered. An item-level inventory describes each slide, however, additional notes may also be found on the slides, themselves.

Historical Note

Glass lantern slides were first seen around 1849 and were used until the introduction of the smaller 2x2 inch film transparencies in the 1950s. The origin of this collection is unknown. It has been added to, however, over the years from a number of different sources. Other lantern slides may also be found in collections throughout the Library.

Scope and Content Note

This collection of glass lantern slides presents a visual story of Alaska and Alaskans from the late nineteenth century until 1916. The collection is ongoing; slides are added to the end of the collection as they are received. Subjects include communities, pioneer life, fishing and the fishing industry, logging, ships, glaciers, farms, animals, landscapes and Alaskan Natives and their culture. The slides are both black and white and color; some are hand-tinted.
