INTRODUCTION

James Wickersham, an Alaskan pioneer, left a lasting legacy through his judicial/political accomplishments, writings, and the diversity of Alaska resource material in his private papers, photographs and collection of published works.

Born August 24, 1857 in Patoka, Illinois, Wickersham became a lawyer admitted to the Illinois Bar in 1880. Wickersham left Illinois, venturing west to become a probate judge for Pierce County in Tacoma, Washington. He next served as Tacoma City attorney from 1892-1898 and was a member of the Washington State House of Representatives from 1898-1900.

Appointed as a U.S. District Judge for Alaska's new third Judicial District at Eagle, Wickersham came to Alaska in 1900. He served as a judge for a district stretching from Eagle to Valdez, Prince William Sound and the upper Yukon Valley north to the Arctic Ocean. Wickersham also sat as a substitute judge in both the First (Juneau) and Second (St. Michael, later Nome) Judicial Districts. Ernest Gruening wrote of Wickersham:

"He proved to be an able and upright Judge who combined integrity with legal scholarship. When the corrupt Federal Judge of the Second Division, Arthur H. Noyes, had been removed for malfeasance after a brazen conspiracy to defraud the first successful gold miners in the Nome area of their claims, Wickersham was sent in from the Third Division to clean up the mess. Judge Wickersham promptly restored faith and confidence in the judicial system." (Box 46, Folder 17).

In 1907 his judgeship ended when he failed to receive U.S. Senate confirmation for this office. A major contribution to this judicial era was Wickersham's compilation of a multi-volume set of judicial opinions from Alaska published as ALASKA LAW REPORTS. His early experiences in interior Alaska are recorded in his book, OLD YUKON: TALES, TRAILS AND TRIALS.

In 1908 Wickersham opened a law firm in Alaska, but soon declared himself a candidate for "Delegate in Congress from Alaska." A Republican, he was elected delegate, beginning service in 1909. His political battles included several contested elections, but he served nearly six full terms from 1909 into 1921 and a seventh term from 1931-1933.

Wickersham married twice. He married Debbie Bell in 1880 and they had three sons; two died in their youth. Darrell, their surviving son, was a U.S. Naval Academy graduate. Debbie died in 1926 after years of poor health. At age seventy, Wickersham married Grace Vrooman Bishop, a widowed schoolteacher. After their marriage, they lived in Washington, D.C. for Wickersham's last term as delegate. Upon return to Alaska, they spent the rest of their lives in Juneau where Wickersham continued his law practice.

Until his death on October 24, 1939, Wickersham continued to develop his extensive library of Pacific Northwest and Alaska publications. In 1927 he published A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF ALASKAN LITERATURE, 1724-1924, which had spurred his collection development activity.

The State of Alaska is now the custodian of Wickersham's Juneau home, library and personal papers. The Territory of Alaska purchased Wickersham's Alaska library in 1941 which became part of the holdings of the Alaska Historical Library. His personal papers and other materials remained in the Wickersham home and later were inherited by Ruth Allman, the niece of Grace Wickersham. In 1984 the State purchased the Wickersham home, personal papers and other materials. The Alaska Division of Parks and Outdoor Recreation, Department of Natural Resources manages the home. It is now designated as the Wickersham State Historic Site.

Wickersham's personal papers, photographs and some published works were transferred from the Wickersham State Historic Site to the Alaska Historical Library for preservation and use as a research collection. The collection of nearly 1900 photographs includes views from all areas of Alaska. There is an album of the Klondike gold rush era, Dawson, and an album documenting the Yukon River prospecting trip of 1882-1883 by the Schiefflin[Schieffelin] party. Most of the photographs have been copied on microfiche for sharing this collection. An index to major subjects, geographic areas and people/portraits augments the descriptive listing of the photographs. The scope and content note with the preliminary inventory to the Wickersham family papers provides an assessment of the diaries, correspondence, business records, writings, etc.

The Wickersham State Historic Site Collection in the Alaska Historical Library is designated as PCA 277 for photographs and Ms 107 for the personal papers of the Wickersham family. The cooperative efforts of the Alaska Division of Parks and Outdoor Recreation and the Alaska Division of State Libraries have enabled the state to make available this unique Alaska resource. Initial work on the Wickersham photograph listing was started by Stephanie Schaefer and completed by Marilyn Kwock. Les Wessling, a library volunteer, devoted many hours to developing several indexes to the photograph collection. Terry Rader from the Alaska Division of Parks and Outdoor Recreation assisted with some processing of the manuscript collection and sorting publications. John Kinney, State Archivist, provided some temporary storage and consultation on the collection. An inventory of the publications acquired at the Wickersham State Historic Site has yet to be prepared.

COLLECTION NOTE

The collection includes photographs collected by Wickersham and some that were taken by him. These photographs were compiled in numbered albums with a broad subject area designation. Album No. 3 was not received in the collection acquired by the state. Loose photographs were gathered together in album/box file 18.

This collection has been copied on microfiche with the exception of some stereopticon views, several family photos and Wickersham's Mount McKinley expedition photos in album 18. These photos were received after the microfiche project was completed. The microfiche for this collection (PCA 277) are part of A GUIDE TO HISTORICAL PHOTOGRAPHS IN THE ALASKA STATE LIBRARY, placed in many Alaska libraries. The microfiche are also available through inter-library loan. Negatives have been made for some photos in the collection and reproductions can be purchased for educational purposes.

While indexes have now been prepared to assist the researcher, the following is a list of the broad title/subject assigned the albums by Wickersham.

WICKERSHAM STATE HISTORIC SITE COLLECTION

Introduction

In 1984 the State of Alaska purchased the House of Wickersham and its contents in Juneau. The Alaska Division of Parks and Outdoor Recreation manages the Wickersham State Historic Site. The site includes exhibits recognizing the role Judge James Wickersham played in early Alaska and the significance of his personal collection. Restoration of the home in which he spent his latter years is underway.

Photographs, manuscripts and various published works from the Wickersham State Historic Site were transferred to the Alaska Historical Library for preservation and use as a research collection. Plans for filming material to share this significant Alaska resource are in progress.

This photograph collection includes the following albums:
