BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

This collection documents the Burford, Spickett, and Caro families of Juneau, all connected by marriage. Three sisters, Josephine "Lottie" Clark, Laura B. Clark, and Lillie Bee Clark, moved to Juneau and married for a period in their lives. Lottie married John Spickett. Laura married Jules B. Caro. Lillie married Jack (George) Burford, and later married Charles Hooker.

As the material was donated by the Burford line of the family, the majority of the material documents the life of Jack Burford and his second wife, Mabel Monson. Mabel moved to Juneau for a teaching position and Jack owned an office supply store, J. B. Burford Co. and they lived above the store in an apartment they named Topsides. This building was on the current location of the Dimond court house. Later they owned and operated charter boats, the Donjac, Majac, and Katinka, and lived in Auke Bay.

The local businesses owned and worked in by the various families are well documented with photographs and pamphlets. John Spickett owned Spickett's Post Office Store, and later the Palace Theater, the two Orpheum Theaters, and then the Hotel Franklin. Jules Caro owned a dry goods store, J. B. Caro and Associates. Lottie and Lillie worked for Mrs. Hayes Curio Shop. Charles Hooker worked as a druggist for Harry Race Drugs.

The photographs also show Juneau as it was during this time. It is evident from the photographs that the Spickett, Caro, and Burford cousins spent much of their childhood together.

An online transcript of an oral interview of Donald Burford with the Juneau-Douglas City Museum provides a more detailed history of the families and their descendants. (<http://www.juneau.org/parkrec/museum/forms/GCM/readarticle.php?UID=767&newxtkey=>)

SCOPE AND CONTENTS NOTE

The Jack and Mabel Burford Collection was donated to the Alaska State Library by Don Burford. The 8 cubic feet of materials contains several photograph albums, reels of 8mm motion picture film, photo prints and 35mm slides. Most of the thousands of slides were shot by Mabel Burford beginning in the 1930s and continuing through the 1970s.

The photographs document many aspects of life in Southeast Alaska, centering primarily on the activities of the Burford family. Interesting subjects documented in the early photographs include: J.B. Burford & Company, retailers office machinery; the Novelty Four, a jazz band made up of Pat Neghel, Earle Hunter, Jack Burford and Glenn Oakes; and the Burford family’s MS Donjac, including the years of the Second World War, in which it was operated as a Coast Guard Auxiliary vessel.

The collection, designated as PCA516, is being processed and will be available for general research within the next few months. Researchers wishing to access the materials may make special arrangements by contacting the Historical Collections of the Alaska State Library.

The theater programs fall into two categories, those relating to John T. Spickett, and those relating to Mabel Monson. Spickett owned the Spickett Palace Theater and was involved with the Louvre Theater and the Juneau Opera House. He and his relations were also members of the Juneau Pioneers Club. Monson was a grade school teacher who was involved in the school student productions.
