Preface

Alaskana for Libraries: A core list of books is the product of the Alaskana Working Group which is a part of the Alaska Library Association's Statewide Collection Development Committee. It is our first attempt to list a core collection for public libraries in Alaska. This bibliography is a committee effort, and as such is based on compromise in some cases. We have worked on this list for two years as our time allowed. We solicited help from those knowledgeable in Alaskan history and literature and public library needs. Thanks to Robert N. DeArmond, Terrence Cole, William Hunt, Jo Antonson and Alaska State Library coordinators Judy Monroe, Aja Razumny and Audrey Kolb, all of whom reviewed our drafts and made helpful suggestions. Any mistakes or omissions, however, are our own.

Production of this bibliography was endorsed by the Alaska Library Association and funded in part by Interlibrary Cooperation Grants from the Alaska State Library. In addition, each member of the working group works for a library, which gave staff time for meetings and for writing annotations and compilation of this list. We thank all of these institutions for their encouragement and support.

Please contact any members of the group (listed on the following page) if you have questions, additions, comments, or need assistance in finding Alaskan titles or sources for purchasing books. We will be looking for new titles for future editions.

Introduction

This publication is an annotated list of over 400 books on Alaska which the Alaskana Working Group recommends be considered first for any Alaskana collection in public libraries. It is meant to suggest, not dictate, titles for three levels of public libraries in Alaska, based on the level of service offered: Basic -Level 1; Intermediate - Level 2 and Advanced - Level 3. An individual library should evaluate each title according to its own collection policy and the regional interests of its users. Some of the titles in the Advanced - Level 3 category, for example, may fit into collecting goals of a smaller library. Or, in another case, a library in Southeastern Alaska may not choose to purchase all titles listed which concern Eskimo culture. The list may seem overwhelming to some libraries, but the committee erred on the side of a longer list, trusting that the length of the list will allow each library to pick and choose which books are most important and have the most priority for its particular collection and users.

Criteria:

- Titles selected are those which have proved most useful to those in the Alaskana Working Group.
- Some titles are not in print. If a book is out of print, and a similar title is in print, the inprint title was given preference.
- Regional or local interest items are listed only in special cases.

Children's books and periodicals (except for issues noted as monographs) are not included.

Arrangement of the list: Category - Level - Entry

Category 1

The core list is arranged in broad subject categories:

Reference

Biography, Memoirs, Travel

Fiction

History

Native Culture/History

Native Language Dictionaries

Nature, Science, Technology

Level 0

Within each category, the list is arranged in three levels, with the exception of Native Language Dictionaries.

Basic - Level 1: Libraries with a small developing collection and limited services (Consider Level 1 first.)

Intermediate - Level 2: Libraries with a more mature collection and services (Consider both Level 1 and 2.)

Advanced - Level 3: Libraries serving a collection and services for a stable, larger population (Consider the entire list.)

Basic - Level 1 choices in each subject category should be considered first by all libraries. To determine a library's level, a library will need to consider the stage of development and services of its program. For example, is the library open full-time, seasonal, or part-time? Are programs mainly for children and young adults? Does the budget allow for purchase of Alaskana, or should the monies be used for a higher collection priority? These are questions which each library must answer for itself.

The list is cumulative: Those libraries at Basic - Level 1, for example, will find titles listed under Level 1 most relevant. Titles at Levels 2 and 3, should be considered only if they are significant for the population that the Level 1 Library serves and fit that collection development policy. Libraries at Intermediate - Level 2, in turn, should evaluate all titles listed in both Levels 1 and 2 and chose what is most appropriate. Those at Advanced - Level 3 will want to consider all titles on the list.
