JAPANESE STEAMSHIP COMPANY'S

Story of big outfits. Book 35. Page 40
See card on N.Y.K. for additional.
When the Jap. shipowning industry was nationalized by government intervention last year, 6 major companies were left to dominate the world's shipping trades, all of which are regular callers to the Pacific Coast.

A recent survey shows that the NIPPON YUSEN KAISHA group is now the largest in Japan, with 245 ships of 3.7 million d.w. tons under its control.

Next is the combination of Mitsui--O.S.K. Lines, which operates 239 ships of 2.7-million tons.

Then comes KAWASAKI group with 140 ships of 2.4-million tons; the YAMASHITA-SHINNIHON combination with 128 ships of 1.5-million tons; and the SHOWA group with 73 ships of 1.2-million tons.

One of the fastest growing of the new combinations is the JAPAN LINE, which had 53 ships totaling 952,107 tons, when it was founded in April 1964, and when present building plans are completed will have 82 vessels of 2.4-million tons. These will include four oil gankers each with more than 100,000 tons capacity and 8 bulk carriers of more than 50,000 tons deadweight capacity each.
