BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Juneau resident James "Jim" A. Ruotsala was born in 1934, and a third-generation Douglas and Juneau resident. At the age of nine, he began to frequent the Alaska Coastal Airline Seadrome where he developed his lifelong interest in Alaskan Aviation.

He joined the Alaska State Defense Force and Civil Air Patrol. He served in the U.S. Navy from 1951-56 and as a tank gunner in the Army Reserves from 1958-1963.

Considered one of Alaska's foremost aviation historians, Jim was selected for the 2000 Alaskan of the Year and received the prestigious Denali Award. First published in 1980, Ruotsala has written scores of magazine articles on Southeast and aviation history. He published two major works in his lifetime; Pilots of the Panhandle: aviation in Southeast Alaska (in 1997,) and its follow-up, Alaskan Wings: aviation in Southeast Alaska, volume 2 (in 2002.)

He kept an aviation photograph collection totaling over 4000 images, many of which were copied from the personal collection of notable Alaska aviators. He also maintained a strong interest in maritime history and kept an extensive collection of historical maritime photographs.
